

ULTRA ACCESS Official “Best Practice” Endorsement

NASC’s TG - the British Scaffolding Industries current “best practice”.

ULTRA ACCESS - always looking to strive to the very best of standards and working practices followed, as a company and as a fully-all-encompassing “Scaffolding Consultancy” and we would like to make the following announcement known...

We not only work to the best current scaffold build, safety and technical guidance available within the British Scaffolding Industry - which is NASC’s (the National Access and Scaffolding Confederation)’s TG - Technical Guidance, SG - Safety Guidance and CG - Contractural Guidance, but we highly encourage others to aswell.

Unfortunately, not every scaffolding contractor involved in the industry does, but they should.

Why?

Because there is currently no guidance available within this industry that is a thorough, well thought out, and as well written as “TG”. And you do not need to be a member to get a copy of, or work to the many different types of guidance, available in “TG” either.

Most Principal Contractors: expect scaffolding contractors to work to this guidance, and are the primary enforcers of adherence, not NASC, with many contracts decided on that premiss alone. As do most Country Council’s, and Governmental departments and/or entities, infrastructure management organisations, and so on.

Most Tier 1 Contractors: will not even entertain your scaffolding company for any tendered works whatsoever without membership, (for one) or not following said guidance for the other.

If you are a scaffolder: you would be expected on nearly every company of good reputation and standing within the industry that you choose to work for, to know this guidance and how to erect/adapt/dismantle your jobs to these “best practice” standards also.

Its not perfect, but it’s the best we have at the moment.

ULTRA ACCESS fully endorses the adherence of “TG”, and highly encourages everyone else to also.
